

WOLTER GUILTY OF CRIME

Must Die in Electric Chair for Murder of Ruth Wheeler

PRISONER INDIFFERENT

Aged Parents Present But Lo at Before Verdict Was Announced.

New York, April 23.—Albert Wolter, degenerate youth of 19 years, who gloated over lewd pictures and was "crazy" about women, must die in the electric chair for the murder of Ruth Wheeler, a pretty fifteen-year-old stenographer.

After only one hour and fifty minutes of deliberation a jury in the court of special sessions found him guilty of murder in the first degree at 10:30 o'clock last night, bringing to a close a trial marked by swift movement and its testimony of horror.

The boy's counsel said with eloquence that Wolter was too tender-hearted to harm a cat, but 12 men decided last night that he had strangled Ruth Wheeler and thrust her while yet alive into a fireplace where, soaked with oil, her crumpled body writhed and burned.

With the same waxed-faced indifference that he had shown throughout the trial, Wolter evinced no emotion when the verdict was announced. With almost human complacency he had been asleep in his cell, and sleeping soundly while the jury was deliberating on his fate. This was made known by a court attendant, who said he had to rouse the prisoner to bring him into court. He will be sentenced on Wednesday.

The jurymen themselves showed emotion, while the boy must die showed none. As the jurors filed in the prisoner was led into the room and took the seat facing the judge. When asked if they had found a verdict, William T. Kulp, foreman of the jury, answered in a shaking voice: "We have."

He then announced that he and his associates had found Wolter guilty of murder in the first degree. All eyes shifted toward the prisoner, but he was as stolid as a piece of stone. As he was being handcuffed to officers preparatory to being taken back to the Tombs he gazed about him unconcernedly, then was led away by his custodians.

No relatives of the murderer or of his victim were in court to hear the verdict. His aged parents were in court during the afternoon, but as he heard the decision which means death he was alone among strangers.

Efforts were made to get a statement from Wolter on his way to the Tombs, but he refused to talk.

"I don't want to talk tonight. I'm tired, and I want to get a little good sleep first."

Ruth Wheeler was killed on Thursday, March 24. Failing to dispose of her body in the fireplace, Wolter cut it apart and left the bust and head wrapped in burlap on a fire escape, from where it was pushed into the sea below. He was arrested on Saturday, March 26, and was placed on trial on Monday last.

He denied ever knowing Ruth Wheeler, but testimony showed that she had been lured to his room, expecting to obtain work as a stenographer.

There Wolter had attempted to criminally assault her and had murdered her with a rope tied around her neck.

The last chapter in the fight to save Wolter from the electric chair began at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when Wallace D. Scott, his lawyer, began summing up for the defense.

Both sides had rested at 10:30, after the shortest defense ever made in a notable murder case in New York.

Wolter himself was the chief witness and remained on the stand 7 hours. Under the guidance of counsel he answered a carefully prepared set of questions and then underwent a severe cross-examination at the hands of Frank Moss, the assistant district attorney. When he had finished court was adjourned until 4:30 for the summing up.

As Mr. Scott began Wolter's parents appeared in the court room for the first time since the trial began. The mother was dressed in deep black and she burst into convulsive sobbing as she saw her boy led into the room.

Wolter's indifference during the trial, his callous facing of the gruesome exhibits and his lack of emotion during the heart-rending testimony of Ruth Wheeler's death, the lawyer strove to emphasize as a point in his client's favor. For this very indifference, said he, was indicative of the boy's innocence. If guilty he would not have been able to face the ordeal with such composure.

"Circumstantial evidence is very dangerous evidence upon which to convict," he went on. "Instances have occurred where men have been mistakenly convicted. This boy has

ENTOMBED FOR OVER 30 HOURS

Three Men Taken Out
Alive From Amsterdam
Mine Today

ALL WERE UNCONSCIOUS

Thirteen Corpses Have Been Found—Police Necessary to Check Crowd.

Amsterdam, O., April 23.—Three of the 15 miners trapped by an explosion in the Amsterdam mine of the Youngblood and Ohio Coal company Thursday night were taken out alive this morning after having been entombed over 30 hours.

Thirteen dead miners were taken out before the living men were found, at yesterday morning and seven last night. Part of these were unidentified and 12 more were in the mine when the about was raised by a rescuer, was carried back through the galleries to the waiting hundreds around the tangle.

"Men alive!" In a remote chamber, nearly sealed up by the slate which had caved in from the force of the explosion, the rescuer who first gave the cry found the three living miners. They were unconscious, at first he thought they were dead and it was only when he touched them that he found there still was life in them. The company's physician, who had been on the ground since the explosion, to give immediate attention to may have been found alive, hurried from the mine and worked over the men many minutes before he allowed them to be taken outside. When the rescuers arrived at the opening of the tangle carrying the living men in stretchers they were greeted by cheers. Then there was a rush by the wives and relatives of the unidentified dead and the miners still entombed, to see those rescued.

These wives had hope that the three men might be their husbands. The police held them back, however, announcing that the company officials would let their names be known in a little while. The crowd grew angry and threatened rioting but the police held them back.

Candidates for the anti-foreign rioting and infield departments are numerous enough. But that is expressed in the outfield. I am weak. I am not strong enough to make it. I am not strong enough to make it. I am not strong enough to make it.

A Powerful Object Lesson

The following news item is reproduced from the American-Tribune of April 18th:

Heavy Output

"From present indications, the output of the Mt. Claire shops of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad for the month of April, will be the largest in their history, even exceeding the record for March, when 45 locomotives underwent heavy repairs and were rebuilt. About 2200 men are employed by the Baltimore & Ohio at Mt. Claire, 1600 being in the locomotive shops, and the steady increase of traffic on the system has necessitated over-time work by many of them, in order to keep the equipment in condition to handle the business. Mt. Claire is the principal shop on the Baltimore & Ohio, and most of the heavy repair work and rebuilding of equipment is done there.

In order that the shops might be run to their full capacity, the Baltimore & Ohio recently placed a large order for new machinery, and much of this has been put in place during the past month. A large machine for planing locomotive frames from the raw casting, termed a double-head frame slaughter machine, has replaced a smaller machine formerly used for this purpose. ELECTRICALLY DRIVEN AND OF THE MOST MODERN DESIGN, the new machine, according to Master Mechanic A. P. Prendergast, will be able to turn out ABOVE FIVE TIMES THE AMOUNT OF WORK DONE BY THE ONE IT REPLACED. (Because it is ELECTRICALLY driven.) Eight modern engine lathes, a quadruple multiple drilling machine, and numerous wood-working machines have been installed. The lathes and drilling machines are DRIVEN BY ELECTRICITY.

"Of course, the Baltimore & Ohio have not thoroughly investigated the question of ELECTRIC DRIVE. Being a corporation organized primarily for charitable and Altruistic purposes, they never figure to save DOLLARS AND CENTS.

It Is Purely A Question Of "Dollars And Sense"

Heed this powerful object lesson. MR. POWER USER, and let us figure on taking over your power troubles and SAVE YOU MONEY, WORRY AND SLEEPLESS NIGHTS.

Lake and Ogden railway, the Bamberger line, arrived in the Denver and Rio Grande yards, and were placed on a sidetrack, where they can be conveniently seen and admired. A glance at these well constructed and modernly equipped passenger coaches at once bespeaks the excellent service promised on the electric line between Salt Lake and Ogden, which commences operation about May 15.

The cars are equipped with the latest Westinghouse air brakes, and are in every way built for safety and comfort. They came in on their own wheels all the way from Newark, O., where they were built by the Jewett Car works, to Salt Lake. When they arrived yesterday there was not so much as a heated journal. There was not even a scratch on one of them, showing the care that was exercised in shipment.

President Simon Bamberger was as pleased with the new cars as the lads used to be with a pair of red-top boots.

The cars are equipped with four motors of 100 horse-power each. They are 56 feet long, 9 feet 1 inch wide, and have a passenger capacity of 61 persons. They are of the combination type, built with baggage and smoking compartment. The seats are upholstered with emossed leather finish, and in every way designed for the comfort of passengers.

Two new express cars, with seven more powerful motors, are due to arrive in about two weeks. Mr. Bamberger says that for the present the freight traffic will be handled by the steam line.

STEERERS NOW CONTROL HOUSE

Fifth Wheel Added to the Legislative Chariot.

SPEAKER'S CHUM IS CHIEF

Only the Pick of the Calendar Has Any Chance Since Regular Order Has Been Abandoned—Bill Urged by Governor Held Up for Months, but Boss Brown Can Get a Ripper Through in a Week.

BY ORWELL C. RIDDLE.

Columbus, O., April 21. From now on until the day of final adjournment nobody, not even members themselves, can say 24 hours in advance what the legislature will do.

The "steering committee" is in absolute control of the house, and the "reactionary" G. O. P. Republican senators who have dominated that branch from the beginning are determined to do so to the bitter end.

Heretofore the speaker has been the head of this fifth-wheel and by courtesy the Democratic floor leader has been one of its spokes. The obvious reason for such an arrangement was that the speaker could hold the majority a bay with the gavel and so-called floorleader of the minority could czar it over the minority members because the speaker doesn't want to be bothered with them.

S. D. SHANKLAND, OF LAKE.

Selected by Speaker Mooney as Chief Steerer of Steering Committee.

This "steering committee" is not quite the same thing as the rules committee of congress, but it performs one function for which "Uncle Joe" Cannon used his committee on rules—it decides what bills shall be passed and what bills shall perish on the calendar.

Profiting, perhaps, by Speaker Cannon's recent experience in congress, Speaker Mooney did not include himself among the seven members of the "steering committee" he was authorized by resolution to appoint. But he controls the committee because he controls its majority; there being four Republicans and three Democrats. The Republican "steerers" are Shankland, Lake county; Buckingham of Cleveland, Guweller of Cincinnati, and Grinnell of Portage county; the Democrats who will distribute whatever favors are conceded to the minority are Benson of Ottawa county, Kemble of Summit county, and Russell of Wayne county. Shankland is chief steerer. He and Speaker Mooney come from adjoining counties, and no member of the majority stands closer to the speaker than does he. Therefore, you see how complete is the speaker's control over the "steering committee," he is its chief officer and will steer the steering of the steerers.

It is not called a "steering committee" in the records. That is too vulgar a name. The orthodox name of it is "calendar committee," because it does as it pleases with the calendar regardless of laws, rules and precedents. At the close of each day it will select from the bills on the calendar such measures as may be taken on next day. No matter how long the representative from your county may have waited to get through some measure that would benefit your county, if it doesn't look good to the steering committee, it will not get a place on the special calendar and will be buried in the heap of unfinished business at the close of the session.

Exactly 11 weeks ago, looking one week of three months, a bill was introduced in the senate as sanctioned by Governor Harmon to create a state tax commission to take the place of a dozen separate boards, now composed of various state officials. ex-officio, Governor Harmon urged the same kind of action at the special session a year ago, so that such a commission could set about at once correcting some of the evils of the present tax system, which can be corrected without waiting to amend the state constitution.

The governor's recommendation was rejected by the Republican majority of the legislature, because, as announced at the time by Boss Walter Brown of Toledo, the Republicans would prepare a "constructive program" of their own during the summer and have it ready for this session.

This "constructive program" has consisted so far in holding the governor's measure (known as the Alsdorf tax commission bill) in committee and forcing to the front the Republican program measure, introduced just exactly three months ago, and known as the Langdon tax commission bill.

There is a matter of the utmost importance to the entire state, urged throughout the special session last year, all summer and from the beginning of this session, but it is not finished yet, with the end of the session almost in sight.

Just 11 weeks ago a bill was introduced in the senate to put a limit to the tax levy as a protection to taxpayers whose real estate is being appraised at full value. This measure is still hanging fire and a desperate effort is being made by the G. O. P. bosses to emasculate it before it passes, because it is a measure favored by Governor Harmon.

Last 11 weeks ago a bill was introduced in the senate to work out a plan for more economical management of state institutions by putting them under control of one board, a plan that has proven successful in other states, a plan favored by former governors of Ohio and now favored by Governor Harmon. But the bill had to be taken from a hostile senate committee with grapple-irons. It passed the senate despite a desperate filibuster on the Republican side, and it now sleeps in the custody of the house.

Last Tuesday Walter Brown, the Toledo boss and one of the ring of state G. O. P. bosses, came to Columbus and had a bill introduced in the senate to rearrange the election of judges in the Toledo district so that the judges who serve in Toledo should be elected in Lucas county only. You see, some of the decisions of judges up that way have not always been satisfactory to Brown. Thursday the bill was passed by the senate, and no doubt it will be whipped through the house in the same fashion.

Why is it that the Republican legislature can pass a ripper bill in a few days, at the dictation of the bosses, but can not pass in three months measures urged by the governor and the people, regardless of politics?

"Why does the lamb love Mary so," the eager children cry? "Why, Mary loves the lamb, you know," the teacher did reply.

And so it is with the Republican legislature. Why does it serve the bosses so? the weary people cry. The bosses own it, as you know, and that's the reason why.

The precipitate manner in which Boss Walter Brown's bill was forced through the senate, two days after it was introduced, sets at a still worse contrast the brutal manner in which the senate massacred the Evans bill for election of judges on separate non-partisan ballots.

The rankest performance of the session was the way in which the senate killed the Evans bill. Called up at the opening session of the week, in the absence of 11 senators, most of whom had not yet reached the capital from their homes, every motion to save the bill until there was a full attendance voted down, the previous question demanded to shut off debate before any senator could make an argument for or against the bill, all showed a carefully prearranged plot.

The most astounding thing in connection with the defeat of the Evans bill was that the Cleveland senators voted against it without consulting its author or even so much as intimating to him any such intention, although he is one of the Cleveland delegation in the house. They will probably hear from the working men of the Forest City in November, for the Evans bill was one of the avowed labor measures of the session.

In a preceding letter the statement that Representative Bowersox (R.) of Williams county, who viciously assailed Governor Harmon in a speech on the floor of the house against the Kemple anti-lobby bill, had a copy of the New York law before him, yet made no suggestion to improve the bill when it was considered by the house committee on codes, was slightly erroneous. Mr. Bowersox is not a member of the codes committee and took no part in the hearing before committee.

If the former statement had been to the effect that Mr. Bowersox consumed about half an hour of the very valuable time of the house in a most vicious attack upon the bill and Governor Harmon, and that he voted against the bill without offering an amendment to improve it in any way, it would have been absolutely correct.

REVOLUTION IN CONGRESS.

Withdrawals and Special Elections Work Changes.

UNCERTAINTY AS TO FUTURE.

Cannon Says He Is Good For Twenty-five Years—Retirement of Flint, Piles, Aldrich, Hale and Representative Lowden—Rivers and Harbors Bill in Conference Committee.

Washington, April 22.—The solar plexus blows are now coming like the tattoo of a snare drummer. One day Aldrich and Hale withdraw from the senate, and the next James S. Havens is elected to the house by a majority that makes something like a change of 16,000 in two years. To be exact, in November, 1908, James Brock Perkins (Rep.) was re-elected to the house by a plurality of 10,167. In April, 1910, James S. Havens (Dem.) is chosen from the same district by a plurality of 5,440; change in a trifle less than one year and a half, 15,907 out of a total vote of about 56,000, or one voter in seven. That is nearly as bad as the Fourteenth district of Massachusetts, where Foss— But you know all about that. Say, it is wonderful the way the machines are going to the scrap heap, all because of local reasons, so they tell us, yet it is remarkable the way the same local reasons crop up in every district. It really seems that the American people are waking up and taking an interest. Perhaps the voter is not just certain what bit him or what he is hitting in return, but whatever it is, he is hitting it hard. I hope everybody takes such satisfaction out of these various results as he is entitled to. I do for one, having observed many things in the past few years which I have not had much opportunity to talk about, but which I will remember for all that. It is evident that some other people without regard to party have been observing the same things. Rochester has spoken. The country will speak later.

The Withdrawal Bug.
It is good to be an American, good to be able to say what we think at least once in two or four years, whenever we get into the seclusion of the voting booth. The voters in New York city handed it to Tammany last fall, and those in other nooks of the land have passed the punch to other bosses and interests since. Despite all the abuse handed to the public or to the people, as some of the smart paragraphers call us plain folks, we are still on the job. As our friend Lincoln said, they may fool all of us some of the time, they may fool some of us all of the time, but they can't fool all of us all of the time. Everybody agrees to one thing—that it was the independent Republicans who caused the turnover in Rochester, just as it was the independent Republicans that caused the turnover in Massachusetts and just as it may have been the independent Republicans that helped to bring about the retirement of Aldrich and Hale. By the way, the withdrawal bug is biting a number of statesmen. Senators Flint and Piles have already succumbed to the virus, as well as Aldrich and Hale, and now Representative Lowden of Illinois, son-in-law of the late George M. Pullman, announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election. The only one who is sure that he will not retire is Uncle Joe Cannon. The speaker says he is good for twenty-five years yet. Everybody hopes he is, even the insurgents, but not as speaker.

Senate Passes Park Bill.
Despite the opposition of Senator Burton, the senate passed the rivers and harbors appropriation at the $52,000,000 figure, which is $10,000,000 higher than it was when it left the house. The conference committee may cut down the amount somewhat, but will doubtless leave it near the $50,000,000 mark. It is an open secret that Taft stands with Burton.

Taft Handsomest Man.
Robert I. Atkin, the sculptor who has been making the wax model of a bust of President Taft, says that Mr. Taft is the handsomest man in public life. The peculiar thing about this model is that the president did not sit for it, but the sculptor studied him at his work and modeled him as chance came. For six days Mr. Atkin worked, and all the time the president worked, also, sometimes answering mail, sometimes dictating papers or messages, sometimes in conference with cabinet officers, senators or others who were fortunate enough to win their way into the presidential presence. The features of Mr. Taft that particularly charmed the sculptor was the eyes. "They are eyes of great depth and of unusual kindness and candor," said Mr. Atkin. "Yet it was his eyes that convinced me he had even more force than Roosevelt were he ever called upon to show it at a crisis."

Abusing the Lodge Committee.
Coincident with the report that food prices are falling comes news of an attack in the senate on the Lodge committee on cost of living. Lodge and his associates want more money. They ask $45,000 to send experts to other cities. Senator Overman says he is opposed to the appropriation, since he objects to spending public money for material for a campaign book.

Strength and Vigor Restored

Marvelous Cure Effected. Doctor Perlie of the U. S. Navy Prescribed Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey For His Mother and It Restored Her to Health.

"Two years ago I had peritonitis and after recovery I had indigestion of the worst form. I tried all kinds of medicines and tonics that did me no good. I was so weak that I staggered while walking the streets. My son Doctor Perlie of the U. S. Navy ordered me to take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I took one bottle, but as other Physicians discouraged me I gave it up. After a while I again concluded to try the whiskey and used four bottles. It cured my indigestion, my strength and physical vigor were restored and I am now in perfect health. I can safely recommend the whiskey as a certain specific for indigestion and its attendant ills." BATTLESHIP FLORIDA IN CRADLE OF STEEL AND MISS FLEMING WHO WILL CHRISTEN DREADNOUGHT

THE FLORIDA SURROUNDED BY NET WORK OF STEEL AND WOODEN SCAFFOLDING

MISS ELIZABETH FLEMING

New York, April 21.—Uncle Sam's greatest battleship, the Florida, is to be launched May 12 from the Brooklyn navy yard and is to be made a notable event. At present the giant of the sea is hidden behind a network of steel and wooden scaffolding, but an army of workmen are swarming over the mainmast battens and the new officials declare the Florida will be ready to glide into the water on schedule time. President Taft, Secretary of Navy, George L. Meyer, along with various naval admirals, will attend the launching. When the Florida is launched she will be about 60 per cent completed and will be ready to go into commission early next year, when with the North Dakota, Delaware and the sister ship, the Utah, she will constitute the first division of dreadnoughts in the American navy. The Utah, which is being built in a private yard, is about 65 per cent completed. The North Dakota and Delaware went into commission last week. Miss Elizabeth Fleming, who is to christen the Florida, is one of the most charming young women of the south and a member of the most prominent families. Her father, Mr. Fleming, is a prominent lawyer in Philadelphia; his home was a three-story house in Walnut street below Tenth and was built as were most of the houses at that time with a back stairway which practically cut the house in two. On the second floor was a large bathroom and adjoining this the doctor had a smaller room fitted up as a laboratory. There were three rooms on the upper floor, one mine, the other two occupied by the cook and housemaid.

Like most young girls I was intensely afraid of the laboratory, and usually ran past it, holding my breath and keeping my eyes shut tight; the older women had told me tales of the gruesome contents of the bottles and jars on the shelves. Of the skeleton of a man hanged in a rooming house, of skulls of notorious criminals and the thousand and one things that only mean horror to a young girl. Only once did I look into this chamber of horrors, and that was on a clear winter's afternoon, when I had run upstairs for something forgotten. But all I saw then was a detached bath tub which stood near a door on the opposite side of the room. This door, I learned, opened on a narrow stairway which ran down the opposite wall of the house into the yard.

When I reached my room at night I was usually too tired to worry much about what might be going on in the room below me. One night in the winter I was even more than usually tired. I looked my door as usual, fastened my one window, which looked into the yard, turned out the gas and got into bed. I had not slept long when I heard some one call, "Mary! oh, Mary!" In such a troubled voice that I thought it must be the cook or housemaid taken suddenly ill. I jumped out of bed and answered, "Yes, I'm coming! What's wanted?" I opened my door and looked into the hall, but could see no one; nobody was about on my floor.

I decided I had been dreaming, went into my room again, fastened my door and got into bed, determined to go to sleep at once. I lay with my face toward the wall when some insistent and irresistible force compelled me to turn toward my door. A light was always burning in each hall of the house and there was sufficient coming through the transom over my door for me to see clearly all the familiar objects in my room. As I looked I saw distinctly a woman standing as though she had just come through the door, though I knew it was locked. She had on a white bed gown, quite short (for I could see her white stockings and black cloth low shoes), a black petticoat and a little gray shawl across her shoulders. Her hair was white and her face was the most pitiful I had ever seen; it was pallid and wasted as though with a long sickness, and as I looked at her she wrung her poor, thin hands and said, "Mary, oh, Mary! don't let them— and that was all."

I jumped from my bed again, lighted the gas and turned to see what she wanted me to do, but she was gone. My door was fastened, so was my window, and there was no other way to get in or out of my room. I again went into the hall, but it was silent and empty.

There was no more sleep for me that night, and I determined to leave my place. Next morning I went down stairs about five o'clock, and as I passed it I noticed that the door of the laboratory was open. Impelled by the same force which drew my eyes toward my door the night before, I went to the tub and looked in. And there lay the woman I had seen in my room. Save that her eyes were shut she was as I had seen her, dressed in the short white gown, the white stockings and the low cut cloth shoes with the same pitiful white face framed in white hair. I ran screaming from the room, and the cook had to call the doctor to attend me, for I went into a violent fit of hysterics.

I left my place that day, but I have always wondered what that poor soul was. The cook said she had died of a rare disease and her body had been brought to the doctor's house for dissection. Was she dead when they brought her there and placed her in the tub and did her soul have a tenderness for the body that had cradled it so long and have a horror of its being dissected? Why had she come to me a stranger? I have never found an answer to any of these questions.

MYSTERY OF A LABORATORY

When I was a young woman I was seamstress in the family of Doctor B— who was one of the most prominent and ablest doctors in Philadelphia; his home was a three-story house in Walnut street below Tenth and was built as were most of the houses at that time with a back stairway which practically cut the house in two. On the second floor was a large bathroom and adjoining this the doctor had a smaller room fitted up as a laboratory. There were three rooms on the upper floor, one mine, the other two occupied by the cook and housemaid.

Like most young girls I was intensely afraid of the laboratory, and usually ran past it, holding my breath and keeping my eyes shut tight; the older women had told me tales of the gruesome contents of the bottles and jars on the shelves. Of the skeleton of a man hanged in a rooming house, of skulls of notorious criminals and the thousand and one things that only mean horror to a young girl. Only once did I look into this chamber of horrors, and that was on a clear winter's afternoon, when I had run upstairs for something forgotten. But all I saw then was a detached bath tub which stood near a door on the opposite side of the room. This door, I learned, opened on a narrow stairway which ran down the opposite wall of the house into the yard.

When I reached my room at night I was usually too tired to worry much about what might be going on in the room below me. One night in the winter I was even more than usually tired. I looked my door as usual, fastened my one window, which looked into the yard, turned out the gas and got into bed. I had not slept long when I heard some one call, "Mary! oh, Mary!" In such a troubled voice that I thought it must be the cook or housemaid taken suddenly ill. I jumped out of bed and answered, "Yes, I'm coming! What's wanted?" I opened my door and looked into the hall, but could see no one; nobody was about on my floor.

ICE IS SACRED

Ice is regarded with a superstitious reverence in Italy, France and England. Common waters are not allowed to touch the precious product. Instead the head waiter hands it out in infinitesimal fragments with a pair of sugar-tongs. Recently the London newspapers have been clamoring for the advent of some enterprising American with an ice plant. Most of the London editors are Americans or have been in America, and their palates yearn for long cold things with straws in them in preference to the yeasty British beer.

COMING TO NEWARK

Eyes of Local People Again to Be Tested by Hagenbeck-Wallace Combined Shows of Three Rings.

Thousands of people have almost become cross-eyed because of efforts made to watch all that was going on in a three-ring performance. This was true the last time the Wallace Show exhibited here, and now it is announced that we are again to be challenged to see all that human eye can see under the great tents of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Combined Shows, the date being Saturday, April 24.

The Hagenbeck Trained Animals composed an exhibition which became universally famous, and when Mr. Wallace exhibited that show with the big circus inclosing its name, he did not cut out a single act, but has enlarged his tents and the rings, and by crowding the acts a little closer together, sometimes having as many as ten and twelve at one time. He has been able to present the program of two popular shows without putting in a fourth ring. It is enough of a strain to try to watch two stages and three rings, and it might have been much worse had we been called upon to encompass four rings in the horizon of our vision.

In the early portion of the Hagenbeck-Wallace performance the center ring is enclosed with a tall iron fence and in this steely arena the exhibition of the trained wild beasts takes place, and be it said to the credit of the management, in spite of the frequent and furious bloody battles between the beasts or the men and the beasts that have occurred within this iron cage, never has a spectator of the show been harmed in the slightest. After the wild beasts have performed, domestic animals highly trained being exhibited within the open ring, where a few moments before appeared their cousins from the African and Asiatic jungles.

The combined Hagenbeck-Wallace Show certainly can deliver the goods when it comes to presenting a circus program of unequalled variety, and it will not be surprising if a record-breaking crowd is seen upon our streets when that aggregation shows here a week from today.

New Edison Records for MAY

LABOR NOTES

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

At the last meeting of the W. C. T. U. there was a good attendance of the members and a most profitable meeting was had. Devotional half hour was led by Mrs. Kintz and a Scripture lesson read from Corinthians, first chapter. After the business session Mrs. Hilliard read a very interesting paper on "Our Nation's Peril." Another "Mothers' meeting" will be held next week in the parlors of the First M. E. church, to which all mothers are invited. A fine program is being prepared and refreshments will be served.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal; it is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen the

New Perfection

OIL COOK-STOVE

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything that a coal range will do—except heat the room.

There will do anything, from heating a dinner, to heating a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke. It can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet not heat the kitchen. Now is it done? The flame is controlled in turquoise-blue enamel chimneys, and directed against the bottom of pot, pan, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is needed—and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stove can be had with or without Cabinet.

CITIZENSHIP IN A REPUBLIC.

Colonel Roosevelt Tells the French Why We Succeed.

HIS VIEWS ON SOCIALISM.

Again Asks For Large Families in Address in Paris—Tells of Man's Chief Duty, Danger of Class Hatred and Appeals For Patriotic Spirit. No Room For Slighters.

Paris, April 23.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt delivered the following address on "Citizenship in a Republic" at the Sorbonne:

Strange and impressive associations rise in the mind of a man from the new world who speaks before this august body in this ancient institution of learning. Before his eyes pass the shadows of mighty kings and warlike nobles, of great masters of law and theology. Through the shining dust of the dead centuries he sees crowded figures that tell of the power and learning and splendor of times gone by, and he sees also the innumerable host of humble students to whom citizenship meant emancipation, to whom it was well nigh the only outlet from the dark thralldom of the middle ages.

Today I shall speak to you on the subject of individual citizenship, the one subject of vital importance to you, my hearers, and to me and my countrymen, because you and we are citizens of great democratic republics. A democratic republic such as each of ours—an effort to realize in its full sense government by, of and for the people—represents the most gigantic of all possible social experiments, the one fraught with greatest possibilities alike for good and for evil.

The success of republics like yours and like ours means the glory and our failure the despair of mankind, and for you and for us the question of the quality of the individual citizen is supreme.

To Succeed Be Good. With you here and with us in my own home, in the long run, success or failure will be conditioned upon the way in which the average man, the average woman, does his or her duty, first in the ordinary, everyday affairs of life and next in those great occasional crises which call for the heroic virtues. The average citizen must be a good citizen if our republics are to succeed.

Let the man of learning, the man of letters, beware of that queer and cheap temptation to pose to himself and to others as the cynic, as the man who has outgrown emotions and beliefs, the man to whom good and evil are as one. The poorest way to face life is to face it with a sneer.

There is no more nobility being, no man less worthy of respect, than he who either really holds or feigns to hold an attitude of sneering disbelief toward all that is great and lofty, whether in achievement or in that noble effort which, even if it fails, comes second to achievement.

Shame on the man of cultivated taste who permits refinement to develop into a fastidiousness that unfits him for doing the rough work of a workaday world. Among the free peoples who govern themselves there is but a small field of usefulness open for the men of cloistered life who shrink from contact with their fellows.

No Room For Slighters. Still less room is there for those who deride or slight what is done by those who actually bear the brunt of the day nor yet for those others who always profess that they would like to take action if only the conditions of life were not what they actually are. The man who does nothing cuts the same sordid figure in the pages of history, whether he be cynic or fop or voluptuary.

It is war worn Hotspur, spent with hard fighting, be of the many errors and the valiant end, over whose memory we love to linger, not over the memory of the young lord who "but for the vile guns would have been a soldier."

The good man should be both a strong and a brave man—that is, he should be able to fight, he should be able to serve his country as a soldier if the need arises. There are well meaning philosophers who declaim against the unrighteousness of war. They are right only if they lay all their emphasis upon the unrighteousness. War is a dreadful thing, and unjust war is a crime against humanity. But it is such a crime because it is unjust, not because it is war.

The choice must ever be in favor of righteousness, and this whether the alternative be peace or whether the alternative be war. The question must not be merely, Is there to be peace or war? The question must be, Is the right to prevail?

Are the great laws of righteousness once more to be fulfilled? And the answer from a strong and virile people must be "Yes," whatever the cost. Every honorable effort should always be made to avoid war, just as every honorable effort should always be made by the individual in private life to keep out of a brawl, to keep out of trouble, but no self respecting individual, no self respecting nation, can or ought to submit to wrong.

Finally, even more important than ability to work, even more important than ability to fight at need, is it to remember that the chief of blessings for any nation is that it shall leave its seed to inherit the land. The greatest of all curses is the curse of sterility, and the severest of all condemnations should be that visited upon willful sterility.

The first essential in any civilization is that the man and the woman shall be father and mother of healthy children, so that the race shall increase and not decrease. If this is not so, if through no fault of the society there is failure to increase, it is a great misfortune. If the failure is due to deliberate and willful fault, then it is not merely a misfortune; it is one of those crimes of ease and self-indulgence, of shrinking from pain and effort and risk, which in the long run nature punishes more heavily than any other.

If we of the great republics, if we, the free people who claim to have emancipated ourselves from the thralldom of wrong and error, bring down on our heads the curse that comes upon the willfully barren, then it will be an idle waste of breath to prattle of our achievements, to boast of all that we have done.

No refinement of life, no delicacy of taste, no material progress, no sordid heaping up of riches, no sensuous development of art and literature, can in any way compensate for the loss of the great fundamental virtues, and of these great fundamental virtues the greatest is the race's power to perpetuate the race.

Man's Chief Duty. Character must show itself in the man's performance both of the duty he owes himself and of the duty he owes the state. The man's foremost duty is owed to himself and his family, and he can do this duty only by earning money, by providing what is essential to material well being. It is only after this has been done that he can hope to build a higher superstructure on the solid material foundation. It is only after this has been done that he can help in movements for the general well being.

It is not good to excite that bitter laughter which expresses contempt, and contempt is what we feel for the being whose enthusiasm to benefit mankind is such that he is a burden to those nearest him, who wishes to do great things for humanity in the abstract, but who cannot keep his wife in comfort or educate his children.

I decline to recognize the mere multimillionaire, the man of mere wealth, as an asset of value to any country, and especially as not an asset to my own country. If he has earned or uses his wealth in a way that makes him of real benefit, of real use—and such is often the case—why, then he does become an asset of worth. But it is the way in which it has been earned or used and not the mere fact of wealth that entitles him to the credit.

There is need in business, as in most other forms of human activity, of the great guiding intelligences. Their places cannot be supplied by any number of lesser intelligences.

It is a bad thing for a nation to raise and to admire a false standard of success, and there can be no false standard than that set by the dedication of material well being in and for itself.

The power of the journalist is great, but he is entitled neither to respect nor admiration because of that power unless it is used aright. He can do, and he often does, great good. He can do, and he often does, infinite mischief. All journalists, all writers, for the very reason that they appreciate the vast possibilities of their profession, should bear testimony against those who deeply discredit it. Offenses against taste and morals, which are bad enough in a private citizen, are infinitely worse if made into instruments for debauching the community through a newspaper.

Mendacity, slander, sensationalism, innuendo, rapid triviality, all are potent factors for the debauchery of the public mind and conscience. The excuse advanced for vicious writing, that the public demands it and that the demand must be supplied, can no more be admitted than if it were advanced by the purveyors of food who sell poisonous adulterations.

Virtues of the Household. The homely virtues of the household, the ordinary workaday virtues which make the woman a good housewife and house mother, which make the man a hard worker, a good husband and father, a good soldier at need, stand at the bottom of character. But of course many others must be added thereto if a state is to be not only free, but great.

Good citizenship is not good citizenship if exhibited only in the home. There remain the duties of the individual in relation to the state, and these duties are none too easy under the conditions which exist where the effort is made to carry on free government in a complex industrial civilization.

Perhaps the most important thing for the ordinary citizen, and above all, the leader of ordinary citizens, has to remember in political life is that he must not be a sheer doctrinaire.

Woe to the empty phrase maker, to the empty idealist, who, instead of making ready the ground for the man of action, turns against him when he appears and hampers him as he does the work.

Moreover, the preacher of ideas must remember how sorry and contemptible is the figure which he will cut, how great the damage that he will do, if he does not himself in his own life strive measurably to realize the ideals that he preaches for others. Let him remember also that the worth of the ideal must be largely determined by the success with which it can in practice be realized. We should abhor the so-called "practical" man whose practicality assumes the shape of that peculiar baseness which finds its expression in disbelief in morality and decency, in disregard of high standards of living and conduct. Such a creature is the worst enemy of the body politic. But only less desirable as a citizen is his nominal opponent and real ally, the man of fantastic vision who makes the impossible better forever the enemy of the possible good.

The Slave of Names. Much of the discussion about socialism and individualism is entirely pointless because of failure to agree on terminology. It is not good to be the slave of names. I am a strong individualist by personal habit, inheritance and conviction, but it is a mere matter of common sense to recognize that the state, the community, the citizens acting together, can do a number of things better than if they were left to individual action.

The individualism which finds its expression in the abuse of physical force is checked very early in the growth of civilization, and we of today should in our turn strive to shackle or destroy that individualism which triumphs by greed and cunning, which exploits the weak by craft instead of ruling them by brutality.

We ought to go with any man in the effort to bring about justice and the equality of opportunity, to turn the tool user more and more into the tool owner, to shift burdens so that they can be more equitably borne.

The deadening effect on any race of the adoption of a logical and extreme socialist system could not be overstated. It would spell sheer destruction. It would produce grosser wrong and outrage, fouler immorality, than any existing system. But this does not mean that we may not with great advantage adopt certain of the principles professed by some given set of men who happen to call themselves Socialists.

We are bound in honor to refuse to listen to those men who would make us desert from the effort to do away with the inequality which means injustice, the inequality of right, of opportunity, of privilege. We are bound in honor to strive to bring ever nearer the day when as far as is humanly possible we shall be able to realize the ideal that each man shall have an equal opportunity to show the stuff that is in him by the way in which he renders service.

There are plenty of men calling themselves Socialists with whom up to a certain point it is quite possible to work. If the next step is one which both we and they wish to take, why, of course, take it without any regard to the fact that our views as to the tenth step may differ. But, on the other hand, keep clearly in mind that, though it has been worth while to take one step, this does not in the least mean that it may not be highly disadvantageous to take the next.

It is just as foolish to refuse all progress because people demanding it desire at some points to go to absurd extremes as it would be to go to these absurd extremes simply because some of the measures advocated by the extremists were wise.

Persecution is bad because it is persecution and without reference to which side happens at the moment to be the persecutor and which the persecuted.

Danger of Class Hatred. Class hatred is bad in just the same way and without any regard to the individual who at a given time substitutes loyalty to a class for loyalty to the nation or substitutes hatred of men because they happen to come in a certain social category, for judgment awarded them according to their conduct.

In a republic to be successful we must learn to combine intensity of conviction with a broad tolerance of difference of conviction. Wide differences of opinion in matters of religious, political and social belief must exist if conscience and intellect alike are not to be stunted, if there is to be room for healthy growth.

Bitter interclass hatreds, based on such differences, are signs not of earnestness of belief, but of that fanaticism which, whether religious or anti-religious, democratic or anti-democratic, is itself but a manifestation of the gloomy bigotry which has been the chief factor in the downfall of so many, many nations.

Good Patriot First. I believe that a man must be a good patriot before he can be, and as the only possible way of being, a good citizen of the world. Experience teaches us that the average man who protests that his international feeling swamps his national feeling, that he does not care for his country because he cares so much for mankind, in actual practice proves himself the foe of mankind; that the man who says that he does not care to be a citizen of any one country because he is a citizen of the world is in very fact usually an exceedingly undesirable citizen of whatever center of the world he happens at the moment to be in.

Nearly seven centuries ago Froissart, writing of a time of dire disaster, said that the realm of France was never so stricken that there were not left men who would valiantly fight for it. You have had a great past. I believe that you will have a great future. Long may you carry yourselves proudly as citizens of a nation which bears a leading part in the teaching and uplifting of mankind.
